

Comparing the Two Major COVID-19 Stimulus Packages

President Donald Trump recently signed into law an emergency stimulus package designed to deliver approximately $900 billion in COVID-19-related aid.

The chart below provides an overview of the highlights of the new stimulus package, and how it compares to the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act signed into law in March 2020.

Item	CARES Act	New Stimulus Package
Total Cost	$2.2 trillion	$900 billion
Direct Economic Impact Payments	Up to $1,200 for individuals, based on income Up to $2,400 for married couples Up to $500 for each qualifying child	Up to $600 for individuals, based on income Up to $1,200 for married couples Up to $600 for each qualifying child
Federal Unemployment Insurance	$600/week	$300/week
Aid for Small Businesses	Approximately $350 billion in forgivable loans through the Paycheck Protection Program (PPP), totaling around $650 billion after additional funds issued in April 2020	$325 billion, including $284 billion in funding to replenish the PPP
Funding for Education	Around $30 billion	$82 billion
Housing Assistance (Rental)	Established eviction protections for renters through end of 2020	$25 billion in aid, and extended eviction protections through Jan. 31
COVID-19 Testing and Tracing, Vaccine Distribution, and other Critical Health Care Needs	Not addressed, but $25 billion of relief was issued in April 2020	Around $70 billion
Health Care Provider Relief Fund	$100 billion	$3 billion

This will likely be the Trump administration's last economic stimulus package. President-elect Joe Biden is expected to consider additional COVID-19 relief options in early 2021. For more information about this stimulus package, contact StoneTapert Insurance Services today.
